

The Department of Mathematics at the University of Toronto seeks an enthusiastic and innovative candidate for a faculty position in Mathematics at the rank of Assistant Professor, Teaching Stream. The appointment will commence on July 1, 2017.

Applicants must have a PhD in mathematics or applied mathematics by the time of appointment or shortly thereafter. Responsibilities will include undergraduate teaching, managing teaching assistants, creation of course materials, curriculum development, and service to the department.

We seek candidates with a record of excellence in teaching and teaching-related scholarly activities, intellectual curiosity to pursue novel and innovative methods of thinking and teaching, and a commitment to pedagogical enquiry and teaching innovation; an interest in establishing a long-term teaching career with the Department; and the administrative, organizational, and mentoring skills required to coordinate a large, service course (1000 to 3000 students, with multiple lecture sections, instructors, and TAs.)

Such evidence of excellence in teaching will be demonstrated by strong letters of reference, teaching evaluations and a dossier including syllabi submitted as part of the application. In particular, we ask for at least two teaching reference letters addressing the candidate's pedagogical strength and one research letter showing the candidate's mathematical strength.

Salary will be commensurate with qualifications and experience.

Applications should include a cover letter, curriculum vitae, and a teaching dossier (including statements of career goals and teaching philosophy, teaching evaluations, and sample course syllabi), and three to five letters of recommendation submitted by the referees (on letterhead, signed, and scanned). All application materials must be submitted online at MathJobs, <http://www.mathjobs.org/jobs/jobs/9572>.

Applications must be received by the closing date of December 15, 2016.
